Dr. Tiffany D. Pogue

Tiffany D. Pogue (she/her/hers) is an Associate Professor of Teacher Education, Interim Director of First Year Experience, and Program Coordinator of Education Foundations at Albany State University. Her research interests include Black Educational History and Philosophy, Black Literacy Traditions, and Community-School Engagement. Tiffany believes that through a critical exploration and examination of history, scholars and activists can collaboratively craft a narrative of hope, and plans for, the improvement of society. Her current work examines the role of Black women's literacy in the practices of Black spirituality, Black educational activism, and Black cultural preservation.
